

Prof Yoichi Mine

Yoichi Mine is Professor at the Graduate School of Global Studies, Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. From 1998 to 2000, he was Associate Professor at the Department of Political Science, Stellenbosch University. His research interests include human security, development economics and African area study with a focus on Southern Africa. He has translated (or has been instrumental in translating) into Japanese numerous writings on South Africa authored by Nelson Mandela, Steve Biko, Leonard Thompson, Sindiwe Magona, Antjie Krog, Fatima Meer and others.

He has published several award-winning Japanese books on peace and development in Africa. His English publication includes: Yoichi Mine, Frances Stewart, Sakiko Fukuda-Parr and Thandika Mkandawire eds, Preventing Violent Conflict in Africa: Inequalities, Perceptions and Institutions (Palgrave, 2013). As Visiting Fellow at the JICA (Japan International Cooperation Agency) Research Institute, he heads a research project on human security in East Asia (ASEAN + 3) and is writing a book on the history of Japanese ODA since 1954 based on grassroots narratives collected across Africa, Asia and Latin America. He is Secretary General of the Japan Association for Human Security Studies.