

4.1.2 PhD (Interdisciplinary Arts Studies)

Programme Code

14892 – 978(360)

Specific Admission Requirements

An MPhil in Interdisciplinary Arts Studies or an MA degree in arts or social sciences, or an acceptable equivalent qualification regarded by the Senate as adequate for admission to the programme and which provides evidence of your ability to conduct advanced independent research.

Closing Date

Applications are considered year-round.

Programme Structure

The PhD in Interdisciplinary Arts Studies offers you the opportunity to develop an innovative research or integrated artistic project that cuts across traditional boundaries of academic disciplines, performance practices and artistic media.

This doctoral degree is a research degree culminating in a dissertation or an integrated creative project. You can present your study as a traditional monograph or as artistic research in the integrated PhD format. It is also possible to develop and submit the integrated discursive and practice-based dimensions of your project in a dynamic, interactive digital format.

The unique nature of the integrated option lies in the coherence and interdependency of your creative work and the theoretical dimensions of your research, leading to an original contribution to knowledge of and insight into the arts.

The programme is aimed both at practicing artists and at students following a more conventional academic trajectory in the study of music, visual arts, theatre and performance studies, or in historical, philosophical, sociological or ethnographic reflections on arts practices. Participation in the Africa Open Institute's weekly research seminar is compulsory.

Assessment and Examination

Your dissertation or integrated creative project is assessed according to the regulations of Stellenbosch University. This includes an oral examination in addition to the dissertation. Also consult Yearbook Part 1 (General Rules) on doctoral studies.

Your dissertation or creative project is assessed on an individual basis, taking into account the relationship between your creative and/or practice-based work and the discursive underpinning of your project. All the material you present for the dissertation, including your creative work where applicable, is assessed as a whole. The examiners are appointed according to the normal procedures of the University.

Postgraduate Programmes

For more information on the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences' postgraduate programmes, consult the University's Postgraduate Prospectus or the various departmental websites.

1. Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL)

Special admission to the postgraduate programmes in the Faculty is available to you if you:

- were denied opportunities to formal learning environments earlier because of systemic or other limitations, but you can demonstrate that you can now participate at a particular level in such learning opportunities; or
- can receive retrospective recognition for them.

If you do not have a Bachelor's degree, you must follow the Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL) procedure for admission to a postgraduate diploma, Honours, MPhil or MA programme. Not all departments have the possibility of admission by means of the RPL procedure. A Bachelor's degree awarded by a university of technology or a private provider of higher education will be recognised only if your degree is registered with the South African Qualifications Authority (SAQA) on the same level as the required university qualification.

Please note: It remains the responsibility of a Department to establish if your existing qualification is up to standard.

More details of the Faculty's RPL procedure are available from the Faculty Administrator, Arts and Social Sciences, in the Admin A building.
