Semester One (1) module (January – June)

Semester Two (2) module (July- December)

Introduction

The Global Education Program (GEP) Undergraduate (UG) modules are designed to supplement SU's mainstream courses by offering:

- a. Courses that South Africans would not necessarily need to take but which are worthwhile for international students,
- b. Courses specifically designed to harness Stellenbosch University expertise that lies outside of normal departmental offerings, and
- c. Transdisciplinary and experiential courses that are aligned with the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

The Unit for Global Learning, that forms part of the Centre for Global Engagement, believes in the power of Higher Education to contribute towards solving global problems such as those contained in the SDGs. The GEP modules contribute to producing a transformative student experience for international students; an intent reflected in our Global Student Learning Outcomes (GLOs).

Global Learning Outcomes:

Stellenbosch University International aims to intentionally create programmes, opportunities and interactions through which students and staff:

- will gain increased knowledge about how global issues affect diverse local contexts
- will critically reflect on their own cultural, social and educational frames of reference to understand how their perspective informs and limits their knowledge
- will demonstrate respect for diversity by adopting pluriversal perspectives on complex issues
- will understand how their actions impact communities locally and globally
- will demonstrate a transformative, post-colonial and values-based approach to creating positive change
- will develop their professional skills and competences in intercultural settings

1. Languages

| Afrikaans For Beginners (Undergraduate course)

Course Code: 59048

Semester One - 114 and Semester Two - 144

This undergraduate course targets new foreign students with no knowledge of Afrikaans. This is a fun-filled course offering you a linguistic and cultural taste of Afrikaans as a language in a wider cultural context. It aims to develop students' ability:

- to speak social Afrikaans with confidence
- to understand the gist of social conversations; and
- to understand the gist of short texts (newspaper articles, notices, etc.).
- Basic grammar: vocabulary and idiomatic structures are taught in a defocused manner.

Please note that Dutch and Belgian students may not take this module. Students with some Afrikaans background may be allowed to take Afrikaans for Beginners (Level 2) and should speak to the lecturer if they wish to do so.

| Afrikaans Language and Culture for Dutch and Belgian Students (Undergraduate course)

Course Code: 59064

Semester One - 114 and Semester Two - 144

This is a tailor-made course specifically for Dutch mother-tongue speakers from the Netherlands and Belgium. As Afrikaans is a sister language of Dutch, the focus in this course is on much more than linguistics and the acquisition of Afrikaans – it also encourages and stimulates acritical awareness of the complexity of the Afrikaans culture. The language component of the course focuses mainly on the differences between Afrikaans and Dutch about pronunciation, spelling, certain linguistic structures as well as vocabulary.

For the cultural component, an eclectic approach is followed. The aim is to give an overarching experience of the complex and colourful Afrikaans culture by considering aspects such as identity, origin, history, and the economic and political role of the Afrikaans-speaking section of the population. Participants are also given informal opportunities to experience the language and culture with excursions and visits from guest speakers who share their experience of language, their origins, and their identity.

Feedback from a 2022 participant:

My biggest learning experience from the course was for me being able to put the perspective of the language into the context of cultural history. This means that I have a way better grip of the complexity of the problems South Africa faces and in what way the language has influenced and still influences this. I consider this course as the most valuable of my exchange experience.

This is a one-semester course consisting of 4 hours per week. All classes are compulsory. The prescribed timetable for the course could be adapted in collaboration with the students interested in enrolling.

2. Arts and Social Sciences

| Digital Photography and Visual Studies (Undergraduate course)

Course Code: 14307

Semester One - 214 and Semester two - 244

This module will introduce students to the medium of photography with a focus on the environment it functions within the (South) African context, as well as a focus on modern digital photography and the technical working knowledge of a camera. This will be done by critically engaging with academic texts alongside photographic works by (South) African photographers, both contemporary and historical. Through this engagement, students will gain an understanding of what a successful image comprises of.

The required readings and photographic visual analyses will engage in complex issues that make up the (South) African landscape. Students will be required to question and analyse the various narratives a photographic series is representing and how the images are being framed through a socio-cultural and historical lens. Practical work and readings will be given at the end of each seminar in preparation for the following week's seminar. This module comprises of 3-4 practical outings to museums/galleries and specific locations.

Outcomes:

Students will have a good working knowledge of cameras and be able to recognize the importance of composition in photography, which will be seen through their own photographs. They will be able to question and visually analyse various narratives represented in photographic images; and how these visual narratives further influence the socio-cultural landscape of South Africa. A camera that can be set manually is required for the practical sessions. There are some cameras to hire for the semester if students do not own one, however, this must be booked in advance.

3. Social Studies

| South African Pop Culture and Identity (Undergraduate course)

Course Code:14243

Semester One - 214 and Semester Two – 244

As an international exchange student, you will no doubt experience some level of culture shock when first arriving in South Africa. During your stay you will be interacting with locals from very diverse backgrounds in terms of language, culture, ethnicity, and social class. All these things play a role in how people construct their identities. This module draws from different disciplines - history, hip-hop and other popular music studies, post-colonial studies, sociology, and more - to give students the necessary context(s) to not only better understand contemporary South African society, but to also gain knowledge about people, popular culture and identities against the backdrop of major historical shifts.

On a theoretical level, the link between popular culture and identity is strong, yet until recently, it has been neglected in wider studies on African culture in favour of a 'traditional', or 'pure', African vs 'elite' / 'modern classical' Western dichotomy. This has '... obscured ... the cultural activities, procedures, and products of most people in present-day Africa' (Barber, 1997:1-2). These obscured activities have histories that are in part linked to the continent's colonial past, which not only introduced Western cultural practices (in education, music, etc.), but also initialized rural-urban migration, industrialisation, and introduced mass media, all of which influenced everyday popular culture.

In South Africa, during the politically tumultuous twentieth century, ordinary people managed to establish agency, construct identities, and partake in popular cultural practices that defied the apartheid regime. They composed and performed marabi jazz in Sophia town in the 1940s and 1950s as a celebration of their African identities and they expressed their fashion and music tastes in Drum magazine. In Cape Town, the famous inner-city neighbourhood, District Six, functioned as a nucleus of coloured people's cultural practices before they were forcibly removed between 1968 and 1982. On the other side of the racial spectrum, some privileged white youths flirted with counterculture and became hippies or punks, while others conformed to conservative cultural practices under apartheid. In post-apartheid South Africa, popular culture still plays a vital role in the way people act socially and differentiate themselves from others in a post-colonial context. Ultimately, this module looks at South African popular culture(s) since the beginning of the 20th century (including popular music, sub-cultures, magazines, films, literature, youth culture, etc.) with the aim of understanding the ways in which people from different backgrounds construct(ed) their identities - both individually and collectively - amidst phases of societal change.

Politics and Cultural Change in Contemporary South Africa (Undergraduate course)

Course Code: 59021

Semester One - 214 and Semester Two – 244

The purpose of this module is to introduce students to political and cultural changes that are taking place in South Africa. This will be done by brainstorming several pertinent ideas (drawn from political studies, sociology, and anthropology) and subsequently applying these ideas to several themes. Meetings will comprise two 90-minute seminars per week, over twelve weeks. Each week will address one theme, and the first seminar will be led by a lecturer whilst the second seminar will comprise (two, three or four) student presentations and discussion, coordinated by the same lecturer. Reading material will be available on Sun-Learn.

An Overview of South African History (Undergraduate course)

Course Code: 57851

Semester One - 214 and Se244

This course provides a general overview of South Africa's history with the aim of helping international exchange students better understand the complex dynamics of South African society today. Narratives about South African history often only start with the arrival of permanent European settlers in the mid-17th century, ignoring the fact that human/ hominid ancestry here dates back more than three million years. To put things into better perspective then, this course opens with a focus on South African hominid fossils that are of great importance to our understanding of the evolution of our species. We then look at the complex behaviours of early h. sapiens that date back more than 100 000 years (including the world's oldest rock art), followed by the indigenous San and Khoi people, and the complex civilization of Mapungubwe and its gold trading networks. Only then do we look at the rise of European interest in what is today South Africa, beginning with the navigations around the Southernmost tip of Africa by Portuguese explorers at the end of the 15th century.

This is followed by a look at the colonial era, with particular focus on the Cape's slave history and its legacies, which leads us to historical events of the 19th century that proved vital in shaping South Africa as it is today: European expansion into the interior, Zulu military expansion in the east, the mineral revolution (diamonds and gold!) and its far-reaching impact, and eventually the South African War. The second part of the course builds on this by examining the roots and causes of one of the most infamous features of South Africa's history: apartheid. We look at the rise of Afrikaner nationalism, African nationalism, anti-apartheid resistance movement(s), the democratic transition, and finally the contours of the post- apartheid era.

Themes dealt with in this course:

(Mis-)conceptions of Africa, South Africa's evolutionary history; First people (San, followed by Khoi); Mapungubwe; Portuguese mariners (why did they arrive when they did?); European settlement; The Mfecane; Independent Boer republics; The mineral revolution; The South African War, 1899-1902; The rise of Afrikaner nationalism; African nationalism; The apartheid era from different perspectives; The democratic transition; The post-apartheid era.

4. Other GEP Courses

| Understanding HIV in South Africa (Undergraduate course)

Course Code – 12309

Semester One - 214 and Semester Two - 244

This module is offered by the HIV Portfolio within The Equality Unit (EqU). EqU provides students and staff with services, training and interventions around HIV and Aids (prevention, testing and counselling), unfair discrimination, gender-based violence, sexual harassment and victimisation, issues related to the LGBTQIA+ community, as well as the procedure, process, and way forward when reporting incidents of unfair discrimination and harassment. The HIV Portfolio is responsible for coordinating a comprehensive institutional response to HIV across faculties and institutional units. Our priority objectives are prevention, treatment and care strategies for students and staff, HIV counselling, screening, and testing (HST), and excellence through teaching and training. The HIV Portfolio is also responsible for the revision and dissemination of the University HIV policy and regards HIV training and research as a key contributor to prevention and management of the epidemic in South Africa and the African continent.

This module aims to nurture and develop the necessary knowledge, skills, and attitudes in students as leaders and future professionals to manage HIV prevention and care in the workplace, both locally and abroad. This module will aim to develop a global understanding of HIV and AIDS through a health and social justice perspective.

The module will aim to provide students with an understanding of:

- A health and social justice framework
- The political history regarding HIV in South Africa
- The impact, statistical overview, and biomedical facts of HIV
- The influence of personal worldview, values, and beliefs on an educational approach to HIV
- Understanding IEC appropriateness and effectiveness
- The role, context, and function of treatment for HIV with reference to the influence of stigma and discrimination in SA
- Most at risk populations (MARPs): Men who have sex with men (MSM), Commercial sex workers (CSW), Intravenous drug users (IDU)

Global Service Learning (Undergraduate course)

Course Code: 13953

Semester One - 214 and Semester two - 244

Global Service Learning (GSL) is an experiential learning programme offered by the Global Engagement Centre of Stellenbosch University and presented in collaboration with Excelsior Creche, Nondzame, Pniel, Simondium and PC Petersen Primary Schools.

It is comprised of 60 in-class hours on Mondays and Wednesday and 50 hours of on-site community engagement on Tuesday and Thursday. This is a reading and writing intensive programme that will require many hours of self-study and group work to enable successful completion outside of 'formal' programme hours. In addition, students are highly encouraged to make use of the Programme Coordinator's office hours for individual discussion and reflection time.

The programme is situated at the intersection between (international) education, education for sustainable development and global citizenship education. The programme enables participants to develop their global citizenship through community engagement and to broaden their understanding of South African history and contemporary life.

Upon successful completion of the GSL course, participants should be able to:

- Analyse global issues within local contexts:
Demonstrate an understanding of how global challenges manifest in diverse South African settings and propose community-based solutions that are contextually relevant and sustainable.
- Critically reflect on cultural and social frames of reference:
Examine how their own cultural backgrounds and perspectives shape their understanding of complex global issues, and adopt a more nuanced, empathetic approach to community engagement.
- Demonstrate respect for diversity and multiple perspectives:
Engage meaningfully with diverse community members incorporating multiple viewpoints into their analysis and project work to foster inclusive, equitable, and sustainable development.
- Evaluate the impact of actions on local and global scales:
Assess the ethical dimensions and long-term implications of their engagement, considering both community well-being and global interconnectedness.
- Design and implement transformative, values-based interventions:
Develop and carry out initiatives that address specific community needs, grounded in principles of social justice and post apartheid awareness with a focus on driving positive and lasting change.

- Apply professional and intercultural skills in diverse settings:
Demonstrate effective teamwork, cross-cultural communication, and conflict resolution to navigate the complexities of intercultural collaboration and community-based project development.

Sustainable Agriculture & Community Gardening (Undergraduate course)

Course Code: 11467

Semester One - 214 and Semester two – 244

Admission requirements: No formal admission requirements. Open to students from all different fields of study

Generic Outcomes: The module is an Experiential Learning Module. Students from different fields of study can register for the module in either the first or second semester of the academic year.

The academic and service components are complemented with field trips and practical work to allow for deeper engagements with global issues as they present themselves in the South African context.

Upon completion of the module, participants should be able to:

- Understand the concepts of Sustainable Agriculture, Regenerative Farming in the context of this module.
- Have a good working knowledge of the factors influencing sustainable gardening and crop production.
- Understand the techniques used to encourage sustainable crop production in less-than-ideal environments.
- Have the skills and knowledge to start and maintain their own garden within their own community.
- Be motivated enough to spread the overall message of conservation of natural resources and helping others to bridge the gap between interest in the concept and engaging in the concept of sustainability.
- Understand the Social responsibility of Community engagement and reflect on the factors that (should) motivate individuals to join in the effort.

- Through the practical work students will learn some personal skills of communication, effective transfer of knowledge, negotiation and persuasion and apply these in different environments.

5. Addendum

Some important facts about the South African grading system:

One of the major cross-cultural difficulties experienced by foreign students when attending a Study Abroad program in South Africa is the issue of allocating grades. International students may find the system of grading papers and tests contrary to what they are used to back home. Neither is 'correct'. Both are simply different ways of evaluating and it needs to be interpreted as such.

Let's begin at the bottom and work our way up: At the University of Stellenbosch and most other South African universities, a grade below 50% (D) is a fail. Any grade between 50% to 55% (D) and 56% to 59% (C-) is considered an average grade. Above 60% (C+) to 65% (B-) is generally accepted as an above average grade. If a student receives a grade of 70% (B+), it is classified as a very good grade and 75% (A) and higher is Cum Laude and is regarded as top of the class. Not many students are awarded an A or A+.
